Matthias Krings

Matthias Krings is a founding Partner of Catenion who lives in Munich, Germany. Matthias became a consultant in 1999 at Mercer Management Consulting and later joined a strategy consulting boutique, Theron. In 2003, he co-founded Catenion.

Matthias has worked for European and global client organisations in Pharma, MedTech and Biotech strategy with a particular focus on R&D portfolio management. He has co-developed and applied specialised approaches and tools to assess and mitigate the technical and scientific risks of pharmaceutical and medical device R&D projects, and has linked these methods and tools to portfolio-level decision-making and corporate strategy. Matthias continuously helps clients master Catenion's consulting approaches and embed them into management routines.

Since 2007 Matthias has headed the executive training and education unit of Catenion, The Catenion Academy, with the goal of significantly improving the way clients manage R&D, value assets, develop project teams and corporate strategies in Pharma, MedTech and Biotech.
